Instituto Torcuato Di Tella

Instituto Torcuato Di Tella

On the 22nd of July 1958, the tenth anniversary of the death of Torcuato Di Tella, the Instituto which bears his name was created. Shortly afterwards, the Instituto obtained legal status as a non-profit institution devoted to public work.

Purpose

The fundamental purpose is the promotion of creative work and research at a high level in as much as this furthers the scientific, cultural and artistic development of the Country without losing sight of its Latin-american context.

Means

The Instituto works towards these ends by means of various specialized Centers. The action of organized nuclei around fundamental disciplines permits an adequate operative flexibility and optimal conditions for high level work:

teamwork, communication with similar national and foreign institutions, uninterrupted work, social and economic support, training for high level research and creative work.

Work completed

The greater part of this task has been carried out by the four Centers which at this moment integrate the Instituto: Center for Economic Research, Visual Arts Center, Center for Neurological Research, and the Latinamerican Center for Advanced Musical Studies.

Latinamerican Center for Advanced Musical Studies

Florida 936
Tel. 31-4721/26

This Center intends to support musical research and composition especially in the area of contemporary music, American and Argentine in particular, and to further the communication with similar national and foreign centers. The Center owns spacious premises in Florida 936 with classrooms, and individual studios with desks and pianos. A library has been established with a large collection of musical treatise of America and a section of musical magazines and periodicals which is kept permanently up to date, along with a general file of the musical libraries of Argentina. A specialized record library is also functioning and being enlarged.

Courses

This Center gives courses at high level to a number of strictly selected young Latinamerican composers. Various professors of international prestige participate in the realization of this plan of studies.

The courses include:

"The Contemporary Structure in Musical Composition"

"Experimental Techniques of Composition"

"Musical Texture in the 20th Century"

"Evolution of Serial Technique"

"New Bases of Musical Theory"

"New Principles of Orchestration".

The students complete their apprenticeship by working on their own compositions and in research. This work is regularly presented in public sessions.

Fellowships

Competitive contests are held biannually for 12 fellowships, each covering a period of 20 months (2 academic years). The total amount of each includes round trip tickets to Buenos Aires and 200 U$S monthly during their stay in Buenos Aires. Fellowships have already been extended for 1963-64.
